March 2013 update from Ken Millwood

Dear All,

Welcome to the latest update. March already and this is my first update of 2013.

I made a decision back in January to work my way through the draft chapters from start to finish in a more logical fashion finishing everything as I go (previously I was jumping around a lot as I got ideas and inspiration). The thinking behind this being that I started work on the book back in April 2008 and my writing style has changed (and improved) over the past 5 years so I want to ensure some type of consistency.

All the chapters have been started, five finished and the rest somewhere in between. It is progressing well and I have edited the introduction and am now working on Ch. 1. The past few weeks I have been working on a small section in the first chapter on the difference between faith and dependence on God. This is important as I want to explain this early on in the book. It is also quite challenging to explain important truths in simple terms so would value your prayers for this.

I have also looked at the need to create more time for the writing process and applied at work to reduce my hours down to 3 days per week, which was turned down. Instead I have given my notice in to stand down as Secretary of Keynsham Chamber of Commerce (KCC) after four years in post at their AGM in April. This will free up the first Monday of each month and several other evenings. I also plan standing down from another committee in Keynsham at which I represent KCC.

Other things that have happened since my last update are:

- Visited my parents and sister & niece for delayed Christmas / New Year (my sister is now engaged to John who she met last year) after fully recovering from a severe viral infection I had over the whole Christmas period;
- Completed my 2011-12 tax return on-line;
- Bought two books on the topic of abiding to help with my research.

Thank you for your continuing interest. The next update is due in May.

Kind Regards,

Ken
